PINOT GRIGIO

Often mistaken for being different varietals, Pinot Grigio and Gris is more a question of style. Pinot Grigio has Italian origins and is made in a more clean and crisp style. The grapes are picked early to maintain their acidity and green fruit notes. These wines are wonderful palate cleansers and enjoyed as table wines in Italy. Pinot Gris originated in France and is much riper in style than its Italian counterpart. Expect flavours of peach, nectarine and white flowers along with a richer fuller body.

ITALY

Home to over 300 different varietals each forming its own unique place in Italy's Culinary Heritage. These wines can vary from light, fruitful and elegant wines right through to big bold wines with strong tannin structures. Often considered difficult to understand it is easiest to think of the wines by region to determine its style. In general wines from Northern Italy tend to be lighter in style showing of bright fruit characteristics and lower tannin. Central Italy is home to the medium bodied wines made from grape varieties such as Sangiovese and Montepulciano. The south brings with it more body, fuller fruit flavour and more tannin.

As with all rules, there are exceptions. Barolo, often considered as the most noble wine in Italy is fuller in body, with a strong tannin structure and savoury flavours with cherry and rose. These wines are designed to age and not released to market until they are at least 3 years old.

Similarly, Etna Rosso wines made from the Nerello Mascalese Grape are often likened to a Sicilian Pinot Noir. Grown on the side of volcano Mt Etna, these wines are famous for their light body with bright fruit, minerality and fine tannins.

Italian wine really is made for food and we believe that these wines couple with our Coastal European Menu sensationally.
